THE KERRY DANCE.

Oh, the days of the Kerry dancing!
Oh, the ring of the piper's tune,
Oh, for one of those hours of gladness,
Gone—alas!—like our youth, too soon!
When the boys began to gather
In the glen of a summer night—
And the Kerry piper's tuning
Made us long with wild delight—
Oh, to think of it,
Oh, to dream of it,
Fills my heart with tears!
Oh, the days of the Kerry dancing,
Oh, the ring of the piper's tune,
Oh, for one of those hours of gladness,
Gone—alas!—like our youth, too soon!

Was there ever a sweeter colleen
In the dance than Eily More,
Or a prouder lad than Thady
As he nobly took the floor.
"Lads and lasses to your places,
Up the middle and down again."
Ah, the merry hearted laughter
Ringing through the happy glen!

Time goes on and the happy years are dead,
And one by one the merry hearts are fled,
Silent now is the wild and lonely glen,
Where the bright glad laugh will echo n'er again,
Only dreaming of days gone by in my heart I hear
Loving voices of old companions stealing out of the past once more,
And the sound of the dear old music,
Soft and sweet as in the days of yore,
When the boys began to gather
In the glen of a summer night,
And the Kerry piper's tuning
Made us long with wild delight.

ADRIFT IN MIDAIR.

It was near midnight and the gates of the exposition would soon be closed. In the various pavilions, with their multitudinous attractions, the orchestras were already attacking that "God Save the Queen" of an altogether conventional loyalty without which no English ceremony ends, and as with the aim of getting nearer to the Macquarie fort where I thought more easily to regain my vessel in the roadstead I had made a tour of the galleries, I found myself unexpectedly before the circular grating of the captive balloon.

Flaming, but beneath the force of the breeze which had arisen in the evening quivering greatly, a line of gas permitted me yet to read upon the triumphal panel of the monumental gate: "Government of New South Wales. Australian and universal exposition of Sydney. Captive balloon after the model of the Paris exposition. Visitors ascend 460 yards."

One hundred yards more than at the Place du Carrousel. I felt myself led into temptation.

With my hand directed mechanically toward my vest pocket I had approached still nearer. It was the ticket seller for the aerial voyage who decided me by this apostrophe: "Make haste, gentlemen. It is the last ascension of the evening!"

Resolutely I threw him the half pound exacted as the price of the passage and introduced myself into the ring incumbered with chairs. A loose footbridge formed the communication between the platform and the car suspended over a shallow ditch. I passed across it amid the resounding accords of the brasses of a flourish, and scarcely was I installed in the huge osier basket when the footbridge was withdrawn, and the door of the car, which was padded on the inside, was closed again. The enormous cable, which alone was to bind us to the earth, began to unroll very rapidly upon its windless at the command of the captain.

It was my first aerostatic debut, and as I ascended on board the Condor of the Andes I did not fail to experience a certain apprehension altogether nervous, a sort of involuntary fright, which by reasoning and force of will I was able to control. I had felt at first a great sensation of emptiness. My respiration seemed cut off, and as I knew that I was susceptible to vertigo I only ventured with precaution to look without over the elbow rest of the car.

Wholly contrary to my expectations, I found myself instantly at ease. The sides of the osier basket mounting as high as my breast seemed to me sufficient protection against my ambition, and completely reassured I realized that I was restored to myself.

From that time I looked toward the earth, from which the balloon was moving away with a rapidity which I judged to be giddy, although it was methodically regulated by the number of turns of the gigantic bobbin of the windlass. In the depths of the night below me I sought to distinguish the different streets of the city over which we were hovering, and the greater or less intensity of the lights served me as an indicating mark. I made out with exactitude the park of the exposition, the palace of the governor, Lord Loftus, with its double range of candelabra, then George and King streets, then Circular quay.

"Honored monsieur," said the captain, addressing me, whom on seeing me step into the car he had immediately recognized from my uniform as an officer of the French cruiser, "do you see down there in the midst of the roadstead the position lights of your ship?"

"Yes, yes. I see it, captain. Monsieur's French man-of-war."

Getting ahead of mine, this reply was thrown by the very fresh voice of a slight and slender woman, who was touching me with her skirt and whom I had not yet noticed. But I could not judge of the features of the unknown. The balloon, which cast a shadow over us and seemed like an immense sinister mass of vellum above our heads, prevented me from doing so. Nevertheless from the mere sound of her voice I divined that she was quite young. Her diction and accent undeniably proclaimed that she was of good family and a lady.

I then had the curiosity to ascertain how many traveling companions were with me. I walked through the circular gallery which below the hoop of the netting, the car formed around a large empty space, but I found no other traveler, and not without stumbling awkwardly over the bags of ballast of the Condor of the Andes I speedily returned to the point of departure.

We were still ascending.

"Three hundred and ten yards!" said the captain sententiously, pointing out to me the registering barometer fastened close to a small lantern to one of the ropes.

The breeze had grown stronger. Two or three times the enormous balloon of varnished taffeta, which was bearing us away, swayed wildly and gave a furious shock to the car.

"The cable can resist a traction of 100,000 tons," said the captain.

"It is truly magnificent," tranquilly uttered the exceedingly calm voice of the lady passenger.

I was forced to admit to myself that my blood did not circulate so coldly. The excitement made it even rush back to my heart. But I stiffened myself energetically and leaned over the interior void to thoroughly assure myself that we had assumed a straight line.

"Three hundred and sixty yards!" announced the aeronaut.

Scarcely had he spoken when the balloon stopped for a second as if it had struck against some very soft and elastic invisible buffer. Then, with a bound, it shot off again into space with an impetuosity wholly new and after a shock attended with vibrations so violent that we all three fell on the bags of sand.

Both the female passenger and I began to ask questions:

"What does this mean? What is it? What has happened?"

The captain, who was the first to regain his feet, leaned over the void.

"The cable is broken," he said. "We are loose!"

Secretly frightened, but unwilling to let it be seen, I said:

"This is a captive balloon. Will it be strong enough to permit us to land in safety?"

"There are only three of us, and the balloon is inflated for 30. That's the medium number of passengers. You will have only the annoyance of passing two or three hours more than you calculated in my company, and doubtless the inconvenience of not getting back to Sydney until tomorrow morning."

"In that case, captain," I replied, "I am doubly delighted at the accident. The ascension has grown exciting, and we could not desire a more courteous pilot than yourself. Is it not so, madam?"

"Miss, if you please," rectified the very slight and slender lady. "Miss Arabella Lipton, at your service." And she added, "But I shall miss my last car for Wooloomooloo."

From new vibrations the captain conjectured that we were carrying suspended below us nearly the whole of the broken cable. Its weight visibly impeded the ascent of the Condor of the Andes, and there was reason to fear that on the descent it would occasion very grave damages.

The aeronaut was fortunately prompt in decision. Like a true captain, he armed himself with his penknife, and hoisting himself over the interior abyss of the osier basket strove to saw away the thick rope.

"How high are we?" he asked without interrupting his difficult and perilous task.

"Twelve hundred and twenty-five yards," responded Miss Arabella, getting ahead of me again.

Panting greatly, the aeronaut added, addressing himself to me:

"As soon as the cable is detached, with a bound we will ascend to two"——

The sentence remained unfinished.

At a slight cry I turned around, ceasing to observe the barometer. Over the gaping void I could no longer see either the man or the cable. In the captain's supreme effort, one drawing the other, both had fallen. Above us, toward the profound night, still stretched the unfathomable space.

I had not much time for pity. The balloon, suddenly freed, scaled the inaccessible with a prodigious bound, and without any idea of aerial navigation, lost in space and darkness, I found myself alone with an ignorant young girl, as unconscious as she of the danger, unable to attempt the slightest maneuver.

Mute, but terrified—I divined it without seeing her, for her fingers had plunged their nails into my garments and flesh—Miss Arabella had seized my arm. Suddenly she let go her hold to stoop, and I saw that she was throwing our sand overboard.

I was about to grasp her unceremoniously by the waist—logically convinced that unballasted we should mount higher yet—when of themselves her arms fell. I realized that she was inert. A prey also to very painful uneasiness, I cast a glance of anguish at the barometer. The atmospheric pressure had sensibly diminished. We had passed 4,600 yards. In the air the oxygen had rarified. I experienced a sensation I had already felt on high summits.

"Miss," called I, striving to raise up the young girl, but it was in vain, for I had no strength. My legs trembled; my head sank upon my shoulders. I no longer felt the existence of my body.

Crawling, I dragged myself to the instruments and saw with terror that the thermometer had gone down to zero—338. That was the equivalent of 6,500 yards in height, the altitude of Chimborazo or of the Kuen-Lun chain. By the light of the little lantern I noticed that my hands were growing black and swelling. My pulse counted the improbable number of 130 to 140 beatings. Simultaneously with an insurmountable desire to sleep, the forerunner of asphyxia, cadaveric insensibility was gaining possession of me.

I had, however, the will to take the little lantern in my hand, but on stretching up to reach it I felt myself enveloped by terrible cold. Ice coated the Condor of the Andes. The mercury of the thermometer had fallen to 21 degrees below zero.

I then clearly comprehended that the end had come, and without further striving to recover closed my eyes and gave myself up.

At the horizon, low and distant, a brilliant and blue light was appearing.

When I returned to the knowledge of things, a magnificent moon was illuminating the night. My eyes, turning mechanically to the rim of the car, distinguished a small silk balloon fastened to a strap. It bore a label, "Oxygen at 75 per cent," and it was salvation. My scientific attainments enabled me to understand this—salvation almost at my hand. A few inhalations of that overoxygenated air would restore me with life, with strength.

I seized the little balloon as quickly as I was capable of doing, and carefully unscrewing the stopper applied it to my mouth to breathe. I afterward thought of Miss Arabella and introduced the slender neck between her lips, which I saw were horribly black and swollen.

Greedily, as she returned to life, I took it from her again, and then ensued between us a strange struggle of ferocious, famished creatures.

Very far below us vast undulations shone, which at that height I judged to be the Blue mountains. We therefore had been carried about 50 miles to the west of Sydney.

Cool now and completely restored, I was considering the quickest way in which to end our adventure. The more so, as saved from asphyxia and strengthened, Miss Lipton kept shouting in my ears in a deafening tone: "I want to descend, Monsieur Frenchman! I repeat to you that I want to descend!"

Parbleu! I also wanted to descend, but I could not in reason burst our balloon under pretext of showing myself gallant toward her.

Without losing time in answering her I strove to maneuver the ropes. I pulled them one after the other, hoping thus to discover that which communicated with the escape valve, and I evidently succeeded, for Miss Arabella exclaimed, clapping her hands:

"We are descending, monsieur! The balloon is descending!"

We were really descending, as could be told by the strong shocks of the car, and again I pulled at the rope, but much more delicately, in order to avoid a too sudden reaction.

"What a gentleman you are!" enthusiastically exclaimed Miss Arabella. "What you are doing for me is so kind! But to think of our having been together all this time without having been introduced."

And later, when the anchor, which I had finally succeeded in casting overboard, caught in a vineyard in the environs of Tonggabbie, she threw her arms around my neck and said to me, between two kisses, "Monsieur, since I owe you my life, the introduction can be considered as made."

I have often seen Arabella since then. Indeed I see her almost constantly, for she is now my wife, and I must admit that I love her dearly. —San Francisco Call.

Cat and Hare.

There is an account in White's "Natural History" of a cat's affection for a leveret. About the time that a friend of White's had a little leveret given to him, which was so helpless it had to be fed with milk in a spoon, his cat was deprived of her helpless young. Suddenly the hare disappeared and was supposed to have fallen a prey to some of its natural enemies. About a fortnight after its loss, as White's friend was sitting in his garden he noticed his cat trotting toward him with tail erect and self satisfied mien uttering little notes of complacency such as cats use toward their kittens, and gamboling after her came the leveret, which puss had adopted and henceforth continued to support in the most affectionate and motherly manner.

An Apology.

The Doctor (angrily)—Look here, Dicer, I understand that you have been telling people that you wouldn't let me treat a sick cat of yours.

Dicer—I believe I did say that.

The Doctor—Well, sir, you'll have to take it back.

Dicer—Very well, I will. I will let you treat a sick cat of mine. I'm not very fond of the animal anyhow.—Boston Home Journal.

EVANS AND MORRAL are still at large. So is Bruggy, Espey and the two burglars who escaped with them from the Santa Rosa Jail.

THE Midwinter Fair opened last Saturday under most favorable auspices. The weather was all that could be desired and the attendance was over 75,000.

BRUGGY and Espey have evidently possessed themselves of the traditional seven league boots, as they are here, there and everywhere at the same time.

IN the grape-growing countries of Europe the quality of the grapes has been found to depend largely upon the chemical composition of the soil. The sweetest grapes are produced by those soils containing the largest amount of mineral fertility, while too much nitrogen makes the fruit watery.

IT is claimed that Bruggy and Espey, the escaped murderers, took passage on a schooner at the mouth of Russian River and are now at sea. We do not take any stock in this story. It anybody is at sea it is the officers and not the fugitives.

THE last of the bodies of the seven victims of the Austin Creek railway disaster has been recovered. On Tuesday last the remains of R. H. Sabine, the station agent of Cazadero, were recovered by his brother-in-law quite a distance from the scene of the disaster. His widow will now have no difficulty in getting the $2,000 insurance on his life, which would never have been paid if the body of her dead husband had not been found.

THE MEAGHER ASSASSINATION.

A Brief Sketch of the Victim—No One as Yet Arrested.

The cowardly assassin who murdered Mrs. Nancy Meagher, a blind woman, near Petaluma, on the night of January 22d, is still at large. The Coroner's inquest has brought out facts sufficient to warrant the arrest of the suspected party had when the inquisition is concluded he will no doubt be taken into custody.

The assassination was one of the most cold-blooded, diabolical and cowardly ever recorded in the annals of criminal history, and if the wretch who committed the deed is apprehended hanging will be too good for him.

Mrs. Meagher, says the Santa Rosa Republican, was nearly thirty-four years of age when the assassin's shot-gun killed her. She had been blind since she was fourteen years old. She was the youngest child and her mother, Mrs. Agnes Meagher, very naturally leaned to her in her affections on account of her great affliction. When she lost her sight she was sent to an asylum for the blind and there she remained for a number of years receiving instruction in music and other branches until she became a pretty well educated woman. She was an accomplished player on the piano and pleasantly whiled away many hours which otherwise would have been dreary for her. Those who knew her say that she was thrifty and had a good business head. Even after she went blind she went about the place taking care of the chickens and cows. She was greatly interested in her poultry and saved up a nice little sum of money from her chickens which she invested in another county. When her mother died she received a small sum as an insurance on her mother's life. This she had carefully saved. But a friend of her's said there was hardly any personal property left by her mother. True, Nancy was to have a life interest in the estate, but there were debts amounting to two or three thousand dollars and to pay these, he claimed, she advanced the money from her own resources. When she knew that she was soon to become a mother, she learned that after her death her child would receive nothing. When Mrs. Meagher found that her child would be left penniless she resolved to recoup herself for the money she had spent in paying up the debts of the estate by having a mortgage placed on the estate. She considered that she ought to do this as a matter of right and to protect her child in the event of her death. So she applied to the Superior Court for the leave to mortgage the property.

Mrs. Meagher feared death at the hands of her relatives. She had more than once told her friends that she thought they would poison her or kill her in some way, but she was told that such a thing was improbable. But events have shown that her fears were not groudless, so far as meeting a violent death was concerned.

It is worthy of remark that the family feud was a bitter one and that the very day of the blind woman's funeral one of her relatives petitioned to be appointed administrator of the estate. Some very interesting developments are expected within the next week.

Mr. Albert Favorite of Arkansas City, Kan., wishes to give our readers the benefit of his experience with colds. He says: "I contracted a cold early last spring that settled on my lungs, and had hardly recovered from it when I caught another that hung on all summer and left me with a hacking cough which I thought I never would get rid of. I had used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy some fourteen years ago with much success, and concluded to try it again. When I had got through with one bottle my cough had left me, and I have not suffered with a cough or cold since, I have recommended it to others, and all speak well of it." 50 cent bottles for sale by all dealers.

Bridget's Admiration For Education.

Bridget was a "hired girl" who was too amiable to believe in a scolding. A story of her should be remembered as an item on the credit side when the delinquencies of "help" are being conned over.

"Why, Bridget," exclaimed the housewife, "I can write my name in the dust here!"

"'Deed, ma'am," replied Bridget with generous admiration, "that's more than I can do. Sure now, there's nothing loike education, after all, is there, ma'am?"—Youth's Companion.

Life's Cares and Pleasures.

The bride had just left the altar, and the dear old grandma was kissing the fresh cheek of her blushing young descendant. "And now, my dear," whispered she of the white hair and timeworn face, "remember that life's cares must be life's pleasures."—New York Times.

Thomas Hopper, formerly foreman on the McEwen farm, has opened a butcher shop at Kenwood.

Work on the new county road through the Clark farm has commenced and when completed the road will be a decided improvement for travelers.

Something over $20 was raised at the ball given here in aid of the Midwinter Fair. It is the intention of the committee to give another in the near future.

The reckless correspondent of the "California World" at this place had better keep in the shade and prepare for a dose of bitter medicine, as several of our people are looking for his scalp.

An inexperienced poultry man at Kenwood, one day last week, took from his incubator boiled eggs well done instead of young chickens. We presume that the usual temperature of the machine was not strictly adhered to.

The heavy rains of the past few weeks stopped work on the new wing of the Home for Feeble Minded Children. It is the intention of the contractors, however, should the weather permit, to put a large force of men on next Monday.

TRUSTWORTHY STATEMENTS.

A recent New York dispatch reads:

"Jam s C. H——, a fine looking and apparently healthy man, was observed to stagger while walking on Fifth Avenue this a ternoon, and after taking one or two uncertain steps fell to the sidewalk. When picked up he was dead. A physician examined the body and pronounced heart disease the cause of death. A peculiarly sad feature of the case is that Mr. H—— was on his way to Maine, to settle in the home of his boyhood. He had passed the previous ten years in the western mining country, and had amassed a fortune. If YOU have any of the symptoms given in the following testimonials you should lose no time in seeking relief.

From John L. Roberts, Slatington, Pa: "I have suffered with palpitation, irregular pulse, fainting and smothering spells, pain in shoulders, side, and arms for over forty years. For twelve years have been treated without avail by prominent physicians in my neighborhood and in New York. Growing constantly worse, smothering spells followed one another, so my life was often in danger and I needed constant care. As my son had been cured by Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, he sent me three bottles. The first dose gave me instant relief. Before using the last bottle I was completely cured. Although seventy-five years old I feel twenty years younger. I claim my cure to be almost a miracle."

Here is a letter from Mrs. John Kolges, of Cleveland, O.: "I had been troubled with my heart and stomach for years, but for sixteen months had been confined to my bed. I had four of the best doctors in the city, but none of them could benefit the weakness of my heart. I also had dropsy and rheumatism. I never took medicine that relieved me at once as Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure does. I am much stronger. My appetite is splendid. I gain strength with every dose. I have gained more in six weeks from your treatment than in sixteen months from all the doctors."

"Dr. Miles' New Cure for the Heart is sold on a positive guarantee by all druggists. It is safe, effective, agreeable, and does cure." Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer one hundred dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

I have used it in my family for the past two years and have found it the best I ever used for the purposes for which it is intended. 50 cent bottles for sale by all dealers.

The net proceeds of the recent Midwinter Fair ball at Glen Ellen were $21.25. Considering the ball took place on one of the stormest nights ever known in this valley the showing is a good one. Had it not rained in torrents without a minute's cessation for hours preceding and during the night of the ball the net proceeds would have been quadrupled.

Messrs. Foerstler & Legh, the well-known coopers of Santa Rosa, were in town last Sunday. These gentlemen have one of the largest cooperage establishments in the State. They have also commenced the erection of a shop in Healdsburg, where an order for 5000 barrels from a prominent wine-making firm at that place awaits them. Within the past few months they have secured many orders in Sonoma Valley and expect to receive many more. The success of these gentlemen has been remarkable. Starting in business a little over a year ago, owing to their ability to turn out first-class cooperage at far less cost than any other firm on the coast, they have secured almost the entire business of Sonoma county. We take pleasure in recommending this firm to our wine-makers and distillers. See adv. in another column.

The Union Hotel is a resort for families visiting Sonoma. *

SUPERVISORS AND THE MIDWINTER FAIR.

The People of Sonoma Valley Favor an Appropriation.

At the January meeting of the Board of Supervisors that body refused to appropriate the sum of $1,000 toward encouraging immigration to this county through the medium of Sonoma's exhibit at the Midwinter Fair. The reason for the refusal was because the sum of $4,000, which had been subscribed by the tax-payers of the county for an exhibit, had not all been handed in to Treasurer Overton, and for the further reason that only "two men in Sonoma Township were in favor of an appropriation."

The Supervisors will meet in regular monthly session next Monday, and the appropriation question will again come up for discussion before that body.

In order to disabuse the minds of the Supervisors as to the feelings of the people of Sonoma Valley in regard to this matter two petitions were circulated last week. One was for and the other against the Supervisors making an appropriation unconditionally.

These petitions, which will be presented to the Supervisors at their next meeting, were not circulated with an object of securing all the names possible, but simply for the purpose of feeling the public pulse. Forty-three representative tax payers only were waited upon and asked to sign for or against the appropriation. Of the forty-three all but three signed the petition in favor as follows:

A FRAUD.

Personating a Priest—Catholics Being Imposed Upon.

A number of Sonoma people have lately been imposed upon by a man claiming to be a Catholic priest. He is clean shaven and dresses as a clergyman. He has succeeded in obtaining admittance into houses by representing himself as a priest where otherwise he would have been kicked out. His scheme is to knock at the door of a residence and after introducing himself offer for sale a cheap book or picture, and he generally succeeds in disposing of a 25 cent engraving or a 50 cent book for from $2.50 to $3.00. After taking in a number of people in this valley he took his ill-gotten gains and went on a glorious drunk, after which he left town for greener fields and pastures new. The same individual, who is evidently a sharper from the East, with his fine personal appearance and oily tongue has taken in Calistoga, St. Helena and many other of the interior towns of the State.

Why is This Thus?

That street lamp on the southwest corner of the railway depot grounds, erected a few months ago by the City Trustees, has not been lighted the past week much to the discomfort and danger of passengers going to and from the evening train on dark nights. This is a matter which should be attended to at once by the Trustees. We are sure that the San Francisco and North Pacific Railway Company will see that the lamp is attended to if the matter is brought to their attention, as no one has any use for the same except the patrons of the road.

Olives and Olive Oil.

Col. G. F. Hooper, who has recently returned from the East, with his usual public spirit and enterprise, will make a fine display of olives and olive oil in Sonoma county's space at the Midwinter Fair. He has also donated $20 to help the exhibit along.

Joseph V. Dory, of Warsaw, Ill., was troubled with rheumatism and tried a number of different remedies, but says none of them seemed to do him any good, but finally he got hold of one that speedily cured him. He was much pleased with it, and felt sure that others similarly afflicted would like to know what the remedy was that cured him. He states for the benefit of the public that it is called Chamberlain's Pain Balm. For sale by all dealers.

BRUGGY AND ESPEY.

Still at Large—Their Pursuit a Series of Wild Goose Chases.

Bruggy and Espey, the escaped murderers, are still at large and the pursuit after the fugitives has been a series of wild goose chases from the very night they sawed their way out of the Santa Rosa Jail. They have been reported making their way through Lake county. Again they have been in hiding near Santa Rosa, and still again they have been seen near Sonoma. Now they are reported to have escaped to sea by way of Russian River.

That the men who took shelter in Supervisor Thompson's barn near this place were the fugitives does not admit of a doubt. These men were seen by at least eight people in this valley, all of whom agree in their description of the men, which tallys to a dot with the personal appearance of Bruggy and Espey. The latter had made no attempt to disguise himself, but Bruggy had died his fiery red moustache a deep black, but, evidently running short of material, he was unable to change the color of his hair and is now roaming around with a black moustache and short cropped red hair. The fact that these men were seen by some half-dozen people at different times and places, avoiding public roads and stopping at no place but a few minutes, would seem to point to them as being the culprits, whom they resemble in every particular if we except Bruggy's disguised moustache.

They were first seen on the Sears ranch making their way eastward. Later on they were rousted out of Supervisor Thompson's barn. Then they were seen in Lovall valley and again at Carneros Creek between Sonoma and Napa. These two particular men, although pursued for several days by a possee of three men, succeeded in eluding their pursuers and making good their escape. If these men were not Bruggy and Espey who were they and what was their motive in keeping out of the way of their pursuers and the main traveled roads between this place and Napa?

Wedding Bells.

The delightful social affair of last week was the wedding of Miss Mae Donahue and Mr. Ed. Burns. The groom, a rising young business man of San Francisco is a son of Jas Burns of this place. The bride, a very estimable young lady, was born and raised in Embarcadero, but has resided in San Francisco for the last four years. She is a daughter of Mrs. and the late Michael Donahue, one of Sonoma's oldest and most respected pioneers.

The impressive ceremony was performed in St. Francis' Church in this place by the Rev. Father T. Clancy of St. Dominico's Church, San Francisco, assisted by Rev. Father Whyte. Father Clancy was formerly a Sonoma boy. He was ordained a year ago, and this is the first marriage ceremony he has performed. After the ceremony the bridal party proceeded to the home of the bride's mother at Embarcadero, where an elegant dinner was served. Miss Mary Burns acted as bridesmaid and Richard T. Williams as best man. Mr. and Mrs. Burns are both very popular and have a legion of friends, who presented them with a large number of handsome presents. Particular notice was taken of an elegant set of silverware, a gift from the bride's brother, Park Donahue of Ceres, Stanislaus county. As they were taking their departure on the San Francisco and North Pacific Railroad they were met by friends who showered them with rice and wished them a long and happy wedded life. Mr. and Mrs. Burns will in the future reside in San Francisco. The following were those present: Rev. Father Whyte of Sonoma, Rev. Father Clancy of San Francisco, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Burns, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Burns, Wm. Burns, Mary Burns, Kate Burns, Joe Burns of Alameda, Richard Williams, J. Hansell, Chas. Donahue of San Francisco, Maggie Keating of Petaluma, Maggie Gallagher of Nicasio, Mrs. M. Donahue, Wm. Donahue, Joseph Donahue, Victor Donahue, Robt. Donahue of Sonoma, John Reaper of Sonoma.

INVITATION PARTY.

The invitation party given by Mr. A. A. Enke and Mrs. A. E. Jones, the new proprietors of the Union Hotel, on Friday evening of last week was a very social and pleasant affair. The guests assembled in the hall adjoining the hotel shortly before 9 o'clock. Then the grand march proceeded around the hall to the delightful music of Parks' orchestra of Santa Rosa. The scene presented was both fantastic and picturesque. After going through the different figures of the march the lancers was formed and soon all were enjoying themselves. The interior of the hall was tastefully trimmed with red, white and blue bunting, streamers and flags. Dancing continued until 12 o'clock when supper was announced and partaken of, which was all that could be desired. SONOMA INDEX - TRIBUNE.

SONOMA, SATURDAY, FEB. 3, 1894.

THE BRIDAL OF THE LADY AIDEEN.

"Oh, Lady Aideen, will you wed with me, wed with me in the early morning,
A silken gown for your body's wear, a golden crown for your hair's adorning?
(One flirting magpie on the quicken tree flies from his perching 'twixt you and me.)
The proudest colt that my land has fed
For you shall chafe first harnessed,
And for your bidding six maidens be,"
(Oh, bird of sorrow, between hope and me!)

"Oh, Earl Desmond, I am loath to speak, loath to speak for your true heart's sorrow.
I'll be a bride at no man's altar, though I be a wedded bride tomorrow.
(Death's hand closes on the digging spade.
Rest forever 'neath the yew tree's shade.)
Six slow steeds my body bear;
To fret or prance they will not care,
And no handmaiden with me would dwell."
(Hark, the tolling of the passing bell.)

"Oh, Lady Aideen, will you name for me, name for me who won my refusing?
Who hath the singing and all the sun on earth forever, and I the losing?
(Oh, the plow horses going off from me!
Sorrow and tears will my harvest be.)
My arms were strong for your woman's fear,
My heart were weak for your loving, dear.
What can he give whom you will not name?"
(Clings a winding sheet by the candle's flame.)

"Oh, Earl Desmond, be you brave for sorrow, brave for sorrow which is no man's shielding;
Love has wept till his eyes grew blind, and victory's not in a weapon's yielding.
(Six black horses awaiting me: the ring of the spade has ceased to be,)
My lord is named with a bated breath,
Whom hope calls Life and despair names
Death.
And oh, his love no world can kill!"
(The banshee waits on the windowsill.)

—From Verses by Dora Sigerson.

The Women of Armenia.

The speaker described the beauty of the country, the variety of its products, the skill of the women in making silks, cotton and woolen cloth, carpets and embroidery; their dress, education and singular social customs; the elaborate marriage ceremonies, including some strange rites derived from heathen times; the poetic spirit of the people and their wild legends. Armenia is full of folklore; the woods, mountains and lakes are peopled with spirits; even the flowers have spirits. The women are the custodians of the folk poetry.

Among the stories told around the fire on winter nights is the following: The day after Adam and Eve had been driven out of paradise, Adam said to Eve, "Yesterday you loved me, when I could lay the garden of Eden at your feet. How do you regard me now when I am a beggar and an outcast?" Eve answered, "I love you just the same." Adam said, "Your love makes me forget the loss of paradise." But the serpent, who was listening, said, "She loves you just the same because there is nobody else!"—Lecture by A. Abovian.

Unprinted Cuss Words.

Every one knows that "English as she is spoke" and English as she is written are two very different things. None of our fin de siecle writers, no matter how self consecrate to the idol of realism, has dared to put many of the commonest forms of English into print. Even the newspaper, which of all things printed gives the most faithful picture of everyday life and is therefore the least squeamish of all publications, shrinks from reproducing in cold type the "cuss words," epithets and exclamations heard on the street so frequently that they have ceased to attract attention as anything unusual.—Philadelphia Press.

Pretty Fly.

George O. Crum, formerly of Nebraska, but now a dry goods salesman of this city, is a man of large experience. The winter he left Nebraska it was very cold, he says, and one evening a flock of wild ducks settled in a lake near his farm. The next morning they were all frozen in. He went down to capture them. As he approached they began to quack and flap their wings. To his surprise away flew the ducks, lake and all, and he says he has never heard of them since.—Montpelier (Ind.) Cor. Cincinnati Enquirer.

He Might Live Too Long.

Old Hardcash—Yes, Miss Youngthing has given me some encouragement, at least she hasn't refused me. She says she first wishes to see my family Bible. I presume she wants to make sure that I am no older than I say.

Friend—No, she doesn't.

"Eh? Then what can she want?"

"She wants to see if you come of a long lived family."—New York Weekly.

Keep your eyes on your tongue if you want to be beautiful. It is the weather glass of your interior organization. If it shows a bright red, be merry and sing. You are in fighting trim and you ought to win, for, as the ruddy, noble Gladstone puts it, nothing is impossible to the well man.

A table is a queer thing. It is said to groan under the good things that are piled on it, while the stale jokes that are driveled out after the good things are eaten are supposed to set the table in a roar.

There are now over 250,000 words in the English language acknowledged by the best authorities, or about 70,000 more than in the German, French, Spanish and Italian languages combined.

Guaranteed to cure Bilious Attacks and Constipation, Small Bile Beans.

The Hygienic Law of Rest.

Experiments conducted at Munich have shown the wisdom of the divine decree that man should rest on every seventh day and have made the reasons therefor clear. It was demonstrated that the system loses oxygen to the amount of several ounces as the result of a hard day's work performed, and that under fairly good hygienic conditions the laborer does not recover during the night all of the oxygen he has overdrawn, the net loss being about one ounce, but that an occasional day of rest coming just at the right time will completely restore the equilibrium and make him as good as new. If he does not have this rest at regularly recurring intervals, his health will deteriorate, his power for work diminish, and he will age prematurely. Moreover, the intervals of rest must not be too far apart.

This was shown during the reign of the age of reason in France in the last decade of the eighteenth century. To obliterate the idea of the Sabbath it was ordered that every tenth day should be observed as a season of rest and festivity, instead of one day in seven. But in a very few years it was noticed that there was an evident deterioration both in working animals and working men. Every seventh day as a day of rest was proved to be something more than a dogma of the church. It was also the fiat of nature. The Munich experiments now show the physical basis of the Sabbatical day by demonstrating that the amount of exhaustion of the oxygen of the system by six days of labor is the amount that can be supplied by a day of complete rest.—Albany Express.

It "Reminded" Lincoln.

Secretary Seward once introduced Rev. Dr. Hawley and three elders of his church to President Lincoln, not omitting in either case the title and the denomination to which he belonged. That "reminded" Mr. Lincoln, and he said:

"When I was a young man living in ——, a little town in the state of Illinois, there was but one church in the town, and that was a Presbyterian. There were a few Universalists in the town, who once in awhile held a meeting in the schoolhouse. One Sabbath during the service in the church some one came up the aisle and handed the pastor a notice and quickly retired. While the hymn was being sung the minister looked at the notice. He had never been asked to give such a notice before, but by the time the long hymn was ended he was ready. He got up and said: 'Brethren and sisters, I have been requested to give notice here today that a set of people who believe in universal salvation will hold a meeting next Lord's day in the red schoolhouse in the northeast district. But, brethren, we believe better things.'"—Springfield Republican.

Benjamin Franklin's Reply.

The man who desires success should be honest in word and dealing. He should learn to do one thing well. Benjamin Franklin, when a poor boy, went to London and applied for work at a printing office. The foreman, doubting whether an American could do anything well, asked Franklin if he really could set type. For reply the boy stepped to one of the cases and set up the forty-sixth verse of the first chapter of St. John's gospel: "And Nathaniel said unto him, can there any good thing come out of Nazareth? Philip said unto him, Come and see." This was done so quickly and accurately and conveyed such a delicate reproof that he obtained employment at once and was rapidly promoted. What we need is concentration. Have but one business, know it thoroughly and attend its minutest details.—Scribner's Magazine.

An Exhibition of Nerve.

A case occurred here which for coolness and nerve heads the list. It seems that a house on one of the principal streets was built upon a lot that was incumbered with a mortgage, while the vacant lot adjoining was free of incumberance. The same party owned both lots as well as the house, and to save the building when foreclosure proceedings were begun he decided to move the house to the unincumbered lot adjoining.

To think was to act, and when the sun went down again the owner sat serenely upon the front steps of his house, which ornamented the erstwhile vacant lot. The gentleman who held the mortgage was not a little nonplused at the turn affairs had taken, but was obliged to admire the cool nerve of the house owner.—Americus (Ga.) Times-Recorder.

Philadelphia Architecture.

An amateur student of architecture finds that many of the pillars that beautify old doorways in this town are made in absolutely faultless proportion, according to classic models. It is just this regard for right proportion that gives these pillars their peculiar charm, though 99 men out of 100 who should feel the defect of a disproportioned pillar could not say wherein lay the disproportion.—Philadelphia Record.

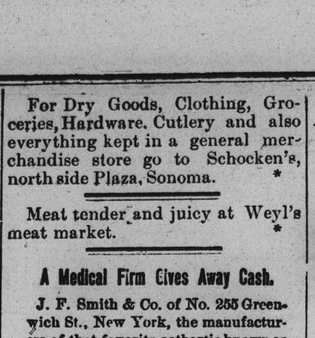
YOUR FUTURE



IS IN YOUR OWN HAND.

Palmistry assumes to tell what the lines in your hand indicate. It will amuse you, if nothing more. The above diagram almost explains itself. The length of the LINE OF LIFE indicates probable age to which you will live. Each BRACELET gives you thirty years. Well-marked LINE OF HEAD denotes brain power; clear LINE OF FORTUNE, fame or riches. Both combined mean success in life; but you must keep up with modern ideas to win it. You will find plenty of these in Demorest's Family Magazine, so attractively presented that every member of the family is entertained. It is a dozen magazines in one. A CLEAR LINE OF HEART bespeaks tenderness: a straight LINE OF FATE, peaceful life; the reverse if crooked. A well-defined LINE OF HEALTH spares you doctors' bills; so will the health hints in Demorest's. No other magazine publishes so many stories to interest the home circle. You will be subject to extremes of high spirits or despondency if you have the GIRDLE OF VENUS well marked; keep up your spirits by having Demorest's Magazine to read. By subscribing to it for 1894 you will receive a gallery of exquisite works of art of great value, besides the superb premium picture, 17x21 inches, "I'm a Daisy!" which is almost a real baby, and equal to the original oil painting which cost $3.00; and you will have a magazine that cannot be equaled by any in the world for its beautiful illustrations and subject matter, that will keep you posted on all the topics of the day, and all the fads, and different items of interest about the household, besides furnishing interesting reading matter, both grave and gay, for the whole family; and while Demorest's is not a fashion magazine, its fashion pages are perfect, and you get with it, free of cost, all the patterns you wish to use during the year, and in any size you choose. Send in your subscription at once, only $2.00, and you will really get over $25.00 in value. Address the publisher, W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York. If you are unacquainted with the Magazine, send for a specimen copy. A large QUADRANGLE means honesty; a large TRIANGLE, generosity; low FIRST DIVISION OF THUMB, strong will; LONG SECOND DIVISION, reasoning faculty. The MOUNT OF JUPITER betokens ambition; that of SATURN, prudence; the SUN, love of splendor; MARS, courage; MOON, imagination; VENUS, love of pleasure; and MERCURY, intelligence. Take our advice as above and you will be sure to possess the last and most valuable quality.

I cured a Curb of long standing.
